Some notes on the Internal Enemy Doctrine (La Doctrina del Enemigo Interno)

*"El enemigo es una amplia variedad de agentes generadores de violencia, que han tratado de subvertir el orden legal y desestabilizar el Estado Colombiano"*¹

Between 1942-1949, with the creation of the Joint Psychological Operations Board, passage of the National Security Act of 1947, Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) act of 1949, in addition to the Internal Security Act of 1950, National Defense Education Act of 1958, and Executive Branch reorganization pursuant to Post-war planning, the U.S. system of Government it's means and ends changed considerably, much as they did in 1933 with the New Deal, and Science Advisory Board.

The policy of National Security,² is in line with the goals of National Socialism, which essentially is the industrial management of social relations toward maximum economic utility, which included to large degree testing & measurement, of both opinions, and intelligence (surveillance) of the American People.

The report reviewed herein is an English language version of School of the Americas³ counterintelligence indoctrination manuals distributed in Latin America during the 1970's & 1980's. It has been in use as Threat Assessment procedures by Department of Homeland Security, Military Police since 11 September 2001,⁴ also known as behavioral screening.⁵

Published in 1999, this report attempts to categorize "terrorists," on the basis of physical appearance, and other attributes; claiming a lack of research on the subject.

It appears to assume the methodology of the APA's Diagnostic Statistical Manual and instead rely on characterization by symptom, rather than etiology; and in so doing falls dangerously close toward Demographic Transition (Ethnic Cleansing,)⁶ rather than true psychological research.

*"Ideally, a researcher attempting to profile terrorists in the 1990s would have access to extensive biographical data on several hundred terrorists arrested in various parts of the world and to data on terrorists operating in a specific country. If such data were at hand, the researcher could prepare a psychometric study analyzing attributes of the terrorist: educational, occupational, and socioeconomic background; general traits; ideology; marital status; method and place of recruitment; physical appearance; and sex."*⁷

This proposition also ignores equipotentiality⁸ of a potential political deviant, meaning that any person may become at some point subject to conditions, (regardless of their psychological typology or socio-political background,) which compels them due to circumstances beyond their control to use force toward securing their legal, and human rights. [A null-hypothesis.]

This tome does not appear to reach any definitive conclusions; and repeats the APA's mantra that the phenomena "remains poorly understood."

{Also see: Environmental Stress / Trauma, 2021, pp. 4, Lykaion Publishing.}

*"the psychology of terrorists remains poorly understood, despite the fact that there have been a number of individual biographical accounts, as well as sweeping sociopolitical or psychiatric generalizations."*⁹

We see a repeat of the irrational actor theory; which claims that any person not attempting to maximize their own economic utility (ideological actors,) are insane. This is a theory forwarded by Meloy, in his Threat Assessment methodology.

*"terrorists-as-mentally-ill approach"*¹⁰

They also propose a theory forwarded by Mongar¹¹ that Power-distance, was the root cause of political deviancy.

*Knutson (1984) "...society permits no other access to information-dissemination and policy-formation processes."*¹²

It is notable that Pollock (1941) describes National Socialism as a system wherein all business conglomerates into monopoly, and assumes control of the State. As society approaches this zenith, power-distance does as well, thus we should also expect to see a related increase in terrorism. Conversely to reduce the terrorist curve, power-distance should be reduced. As a matter of political science, the cause & solution is politico-structural [environmental,] rather than biogenic. The post industrial revolution imposition of social management through applied psychology, has created a problem, and is offering it's own Eugenics based solution. In public relations this process is known as Catalytic Issues Management; in criminology it is known as racketeering.

Prior to the philosophy of CIM, the provocative strategy of asymmetric engagement was proposed in Serious Games theory.

"The government can win only by luring the insurgents out of strategy 1. <...> If government can lure the insurgents into 2 or 3, it can adopt strategy 3 and win,"¹³

These programs also have the characteristic of area denial operations¹⁴, intended to create a hostile environment for the Subject, in any part of the U.S. or other foreign nation party to these acts.

The justifications for these acts (enhanced interrogations,) are based exclusively on slanders and libels, which "set a man in an odious or ridiculous light," and "endanger a man in law, exclude him from society, hurt his trade or livelihood, as to call him a quack,"¹⁵; and are otherwise known as hearsay.

By continually placing the subject in a position of jeopardy, without access to legal counsel, or due process protections,¹⁶ and exposing them to increasing levels of stressful stimuli,¹⁷ the interrogator eventually succeeds in eliciting a false-positive reaction for threat, a pathological form of maladaptive behavior to stress. This is also known as abuse, and torture. The sequelae of Torture & Abuse is colored in threat management as an indicator of terrorist intent; justifying taking custody of the subject. Probable cause is manufactured by these manuals on a basis of imputed characteristics, such as ethnic background. Compliance is eventually attained, (Demand Characteristic,) either through a false confession, criminal act, or learned behavior against political activity, as submissive behavior (abasement;) Or, dominant (resistant,) behavior justifies eventual use of force against the subject.

This is known as interventionist causality, and is non-scientific. By these means any person can be made to elicit characteristics of a terrorist, threat, or pathology; in all cases. This is known as an experimental situation.¹⁸

FRD's report perpetuates a fallacy that there is not sufficient access to psychological research to make any conclusions. This fallacy is an act of deception designed to conceal the Sources & Methods of these techniques.¹⁹

(There is in fact a tremendous volume of psychological literature on the subject, the over 100GB of reports collected here, [Bronx Project] stands testament to that.)

This fallacy serves a military purpose in that the solution to this crisis is to detain potential political deviants, outside normal criminal justice procedures, and subject them to additional observation & experimentation. This philosophy was termed the Political Abuse of Psychiatry by the US Congress.

It also proposes the necessity for torture when it states *"terrorists, [are] loath to reveal their secrets to interrogators,"*²⁰ thereby justifying "Enhanced Interrogation" procedures.

{Also see: Die Geheimpolizei, Lykaion Publishing, 2020.}

The writing style of these reports, which include such phrases triggering a threat or orienting response in the reader could satisfy the qualification of anti-social behavior under trance; (as a form of discrimination learning.) Pursuant to narrative 'transportation'.²¹

We see rationalization, for engaging male, ethnic minorities in torture procedures; under a presumption of guilt. A justification for Demographic Transition (ethnic cleansing) activities.

*"terrorists often are unemployed," "male" and ethnic minorities.*²²

"such as youths in Algerian ghettos or the Gaza Strip,"

Both Harding (1941),ⁱ as well as World Economic Forum Risk Report (2015) claim that income inequality, and "youth bulge" are major impediments to a doctrine of global National Socialism.ⁱⁱ

This text is not unlike Dion Fortune's (1930) [counterintelligence] defense manual;ⁱⁱⁱ which also advocates for ethnic cleansing, under color, and a presumption of guilt of non-whites.

FRD has a specific political bias against [communists] such as the "anarchistic or a Marxist-Leninist terrorist".²³

However we also notice an interesting trait among interrogators is their own racial bias. The author has been repeatedly slandered by interrogators as an illiterate, violent drug-addict; purely on the basis of her "not pure white" status; despite being from a wealthy, and educated family.

{Behavior Under Trance, Lykaion Publishing, 2021, pp. 3.}

A latent variable in all of these models is the interventionist causality of their methodology, and lack of attention to the interrogator's own psychological profile.

These manuals serve more as memory schemata, and indoctrination than true scientific discipline.

They appear to align more closely to service of political & economic goals of the Central Intelligence Agency, than actual psychological science on the topic; of which there is ample, (credibility gap.)²⁴

We also must note a habit of Western Intelligence services of operating "Honey Pots" (aka Trust Operation,) which is to say recruiting, and coercing vulnerable persons, for false positive operations to justify these policies, and budgets.

{eg. Christmas Tree Bomber, Portland Oregon, 2010.}

What is notable is their reference to Ted Kazynski who was a victim of H. A. Murray's Stress-Dyad disclosure experiments, which were a continuation of, and precursor to the CIA Enhanced Interrogation program. (A Form of Experimental [non-endogenous] Neurosis.) [Ample work is available on topic through the Bronx Project.]

When they speak of "A useful profile"²⁵ what they are really concerned with [criminal syndicalism] is preventative, or presumptive arrests.

We then see Kraepelin, or genetic defect psychology proposed, *"rehabilitation in nearly impossible because ethnic animosity or hatred is "in their blood" and passed from father to son."*²⁶

These theories are a legacy of the Eugenics movement, (also see: NAZI holocaust,) which claimed all mental illness was a result from proposed genetic deficiencies in non-white races. A theory still held on to by the American Psychiatric Association; despite a lack of scientific evidence to support it.

Curiously this work states "anarchists stand out as a major exception to the generally nonpathological characteristics of most terrorists." One of Emil Kraepelin's paranoid patients was an "anarchist"; who claimed to be a victim of State persecution; the genesis of the APA's persecutory disorder category.²⁷

It then goes on to advocate genocide²⁸ when it states:

"Post's distinction between anarchic-ideologues and ethnic separatists appears to be supported by Rona M. Fields...a child growing up in violence-plagued West Belfast is more likely to develop into a terrorist as an adult than is a child 24 "The CIA's explanation was that Foreign Affairs requested the article. But it had nothing to say about the implication that the public was exposed to a vital argument of American policy without knowing who was really responsible for it....The 'credibility gap' between Government and governed is already wider than is safe for our free institutions. More than any others, the academic community should be on guard against this gap because the efficacy of intellectual freedom requires not only a speaker but a listener." growing up in peaceful Oslo, Norway,”

This work makes note of the Harlequin complex, “the terrorist’s death-seeking or death-confronting behavior.” It then refers indirectly to both issues of ‘dislocation’ as well as object relations.

This report appears to ignore overt issues of military doctrine regarding asymmetric warfare, making it pro-counterinsurgency (COIN) literature; and the military necessity of a smaller force to employ unconventional tactics to gain advantage against a better armed adversary, when it raises the issue of Hamas.

FRD then makes a segue into Sarbine’s Role Taking theory of hypnosis, and hypnotic (trance logic,) behavior.

*“For whatever reason individuals assume the role of terrorists,”*²⁹

This deserves more than an entire chapter of devotion, yet the authors of this work gloss over the topic in a single paragraph; citing only “pressures toward conformity and consensus.”

The Bronx Project has several headings under the title of Group Dynamics, as well as Large Group Awareness Training, to which the Federal Research Division appears to be referring.³⁰

Value-acquisition [needs] theory is cited as a possible component. One frustrating thing about [CIA] products is they almost never directly cite, nor refer to, (let alone provide a bibliography for,) the concepts referred to in their reports; making it very difficult to verify the veracity of their conclusions- unless one is already an expert in the field.

Despite the fact the stated purpose of this report is to determine methodologically, determinants of political deviancy, it appears to make no mention of Apperception Tests, devised by Murray eg.³¹

The report states in referring to [indoctrination] methods of terrorist recruitment:

“Terrorist groups are similar to religious sects or cults.”

An apperception test is exactly what is used to determine such beliefs, along with Concealed Information Tests [Branscombe (1999); Bruno (2011,) et al.] Enhanced Interrogation procedures usually elicit such values. This report earlier notes [harsh-superego (values)] are a common trait among terrorists; (as ideologically motivated actors.)

This report does however bring up goal directed (conative) striving.

“Every group...has two opposing forces- cooperative, goal-directed, conflict-free manner”

29 Ibid, pp. 34

31 Western Intelligence services have a long history of expertise in interrogation & assessment techniques; which the Federal Research Division appears to demonstrate no knowledge of.

It does not make a distinction between Dominant & Submissive behavior specifically;³² (particularly where it raises issues of integrative versus maladaptive behavior under stress.)

*“Action relieves stress”*³³

This report does however include issues relating to Bartlett’s Memory Schema:

“The variables from which their belief systems are formed include their political and social environments, cultural traditions, and the internal dynamics of their clandestine groups.”

“According to cognitive theory, an individual’s mental activities (perception, memory, and reasoning) are important determinants of behavior.”

These topics are covered in Bruner’s seminal work, Study of Thinking.³⁴

The same language used by FRD, is also used in Colombia’s Internal Enemy Doctrine.³⁵

*“The terrorist is often labeled as a fanatic,”*³⁶

*“El bandolero comunista que tiene una alta moral, porque está convencido de la causa que defiende, porque se ha despertado en él un fanatismo político que lo lleva a matar sin vacilación y a combatir sin temores a los enemigos de su credo y a lo que se interponga en el camino, pues saben que en la lucha en que se han empeñado se está jugando el porvenir y hasta su propia persona”*³⁷

The work makes a fatal error however in describing a person’s religious or political beliefs (or lack thereof,) as being determinants of terrorism when it states:

“Terrorists view the world within the narrow lens of their own ideology, whether it be Marxism-Leninism, anarchism, nationalism, Islamic fundamentalism (see Glossary), or some other ideology.”

What the Federal Research Division commits in this sentence constitutes the basis for a claim of Political Asylum; whereas:

“Certain individuals, although not taking any part in the hostilities, may nevertheless face a reasonable chance of persecution because of their civil or political status, or due to a status which is imputed to them by combatants in the civil war.”

The United States is actively engaging in a Civil War, against its own citizens, on the basis of imputed or actual ethnic or political status; for economic and political purposes.

Such publications should come with legal disclaimers, and are at potential claim for serious liabilities where it instructs or advocates others to commit potential acts of violence, deprivations of liberty or privacy, or other rights, such as equal access to employment, housing, education, or medical care, due to a persons actual or imputed ethnic or political status.

Where the U.S. Federal Government has recently found ways to limit their exposure in court for damages, such as “Twiqbal,” it invites use of force as the only means of redressing grievances pursuant to rape & torture by Government contractors of innocent persons.³⁸

The morbid hatred³⁹ engendered in victims of torture [these acts] increases the likelihood of terrorist attack,⁴⁰ but does not reduce it, which FRD’s report does acknowledge.⁴¹

Symptoms of Post-traumatic Stress Disorder however do not stem from pathological “narcissism,” but cumulative trauma, and FRD ignores issues of equipotentiality in typological assessments. Law Enforcement personnel should not be attempting to engage in forensic assessments of suspects, nor are the qualified or licensed to do so.

Such assessments are usually retained at a rate of $3,500-$6,000, and performed in clinical settings by PhD’s. These costs are not covered by Federal insurance plans such as Medicare; and require an attorney’s referral.

Even the American Psychiatric Association’s Diagnostic & Statistical Manual has a legal disclaimer stating it should not be used in [etiological] forensic settings.

Threat-Assessment procedures are a violation of Brandenburg v. Ohio (1969), and constitute Lèse-majesté offenses, which are unlawful under the 1st Amendment; and may also constitute bills of attainder.

Any person attempting to deploy these methods should first consult with their own personal legal counsel.⁴²

Schmitt (1992)^{iv} discusses the lawfulness of pre-emptive strikes, or attacks, and Jacqueline (2016)^v classifies such acts as those of State Repression.

The methods deployed are outlined elsewhere in Bronx Project files; and involve sexual abuse, physical and verbal abuse of subjects in terrorem, and have been known to leave subjects permanently mentally and physically disabled.

The work reviewed herein belies its own philosophy when it describes “fundamentalism as pathology.”⁴³

National Socialism is the industrial management of social relations toward maximum economic utility; with an underlying ideology that some lives are worth more than others. It is fundamentally anti-American.

This work, fulfills the description of a training manual for Fosdick’s Political Police.

*“The Continental theory, which, evolved from the necessities of autocratic government, makes of the police force the strong arm of the ruling classes....and are allowed to resort to what are popularly known as ‘third degree’ methods in their endeavor to wring a confession of guilt from those whom they accuse.... are given powers to restrict freedom of discussion and the right of public meeting.... The great safeguards.... are almost entirely lacking...the idea early developed that the state,... should resort as well to preventive measures.... Out of this theory grew an extensive supervision of the classes considered dangerous to the community,”*⁴⁴

This was known in Prussia, from which these methods derive, as the Gestapo.

National Socialism, and the rationalization described herein, is itself an ideology.

*“It is the interest of the ruling group as a whole that is decisive, and not the individual interests of those who belong to it.”*⁴⁵

Religious and other cultural values, outside norms prescribed by the State, (irrational economic actors,⁴⁶) are the great enemy to National Socialism.

“The human individual is cared for and even cherished only insofar as he is the source of labor power, furnishing the instruments of war and expansion....National Socialism has done away with discrimination against illegitimate mothers and children, it has encouraged extra-marital relations between the sexes,”

What FRD describes fits Pollock’s definition of National Socialism.

*“...rational choice theorists point to unequal socioeconomic development as the basic reason for the discontent and alienation these individuals experience. Caught between an Islamic culture that provides moral values and spiritual satisfaction and a modernizing Western culture that provides access to material improvement,”*⁴⁷

Describing morals as a “distorting lens,”⁴⁸ FRD describes non-economic striving as pathology.

This report almost raises more questions than it answers, frustrating the potential reader; however the answers won't be found in the capture, nor interrogation of [terrorist suspects.]

Few terrorist likely have the educational background of forensic psychology necessary to answer these questions. A detective's time would be better spent reading a book.

The report reviewed herein is a counterinsurgency document, employing tactics of both psychological (unconventional) warfare, and military deception against field operatives; in what is termed political warfare.
